MEETINGS - SOCIAL

Quiz Nights

Come to our 'lots of fun' Fortnightly Quiz Night! Come to Moby's (previously Hotel Dili and Gino's Hotel), on the beach road opposite Largo de Lecidere just west of the World Bank, in good time to be settled in by 7.30pm. It's usually no problem getting a lift home as there's always someone going in your direction - just ask me to tout for one. But ask early enough, not when you're the last person in the bar. Prizes of good books. The charge is $5/person. If anybody would like to donate GREAT books or other prizes, bring them along or let me know where I could collect. Come either in teams of four, five or six (broad demographic mixtures maximize chances of success) or ready to make new friends - I can put you in a team. Email me on tracey\_morgan@yahoo.com for the date of the next night.

If you want to let or rent a house, sell a car or any unwanted goods contact us on magazine@guideposttimor.com before 20th of each month. It's FREE! N.B. for private individuals non commercial.

DILI HASH HOUSE HARRIERS

The Hash House Harriers is a world-wide 'drinking club with a running problem'. The Dili Hash House Harriers (DiliH3) is the local branch. Everyone is welcome and our members are from many countries & walks of life. We meet at a different location every Saturday between 4pm and 4:30pm. Walkers and runners follow trails set by "Hares" and see sights of Dili and surrounding districts rarely seen. We reunite after the exercise for refreshment and a bit of fun, then often go out to dinner afterwards. We strongly encourage Timorese members. Each walk or run costs only $5. You can find the location for each week's run and walk at <https://facebook.com/DiliH3> - On-On!

Spice Girls reunion tour: Will it be the same without Victoria Beckham?

It's the news every Spice Girls fan has been waiting for - the girls are going back on tour, 23 years after they first spiced up our lives. But Baby, Ginger, Scary and Sporty will be without their fifth member - Posh. Victoria Beckham has declined to take part, meaning the band comes a four piece, and not for the first time. Geri Horner originally left the band in 1998, and the rest of the girls performed together until their split in 2000. The band all returned to the stage for a 10-year reunion tour back in 2007 and last performed together at the closing ceremony of the London 2012 Olympic Games. So will it be the same without all five Spices in action? We called on some superfans to get their opinions. 'Disappointing with four' Holly Shorhall is a huge fan from Dublin and says Posh not being included is "disappointing in two ways". "The first - the fact that Victoria has decided against partaking in the tour, and the second being that the other four girls have decided to go ahead without her," she says. "The Spice Girls, to me, were never The Spice Girls when there were only four of them, and although Victoria Beckham will always be my favourite of the five, I would feel the exact same if Emma, Geri or either of the two Mels weren't included on the bill." Michelle Dignan is now a travel presenter on BBC Radio 5Live, but back in the 90s was part of a Spice Girls tribute band with her school friends (she performed as both Geri and Mel B - impressive). "I'm gutted [Victoria] isn't included but not surprised," she says. "Out of all of them, she really doesn't need the career boost! "She has a very well respected [fashion] brand - maybe she is worried that might be damaged by doing something 'cheesy'. "I'm very surprised that they are going ahead anyway as I think these things always work better when all members are involved." The band will embark on a six-date stadium tour across the UK next summer - stopping off in cities including Manchester, Sunderland and London. "I'll go - but it won't feel complete" Holly is certainly on board to see them after missing out in the past. "I think I probably will [go and see them], but it genuinely won't feel complete - and I would say that no matter who was missing. "They kicked off their first tour as a five-piece in Dublin in 1998, when I was nine years old. "Tickets sold out fairly quickly and as my parents had four kids under 11 then, it just wasn't something that was possible at the time. "When all five did the comeback tour together in 2008, they didn't do any Irish dates as, if I recall correctly, our main arena venue was being renovated." For Michelle, she's on the fence about whether she will go and see the band on this tour, having seen them "loads in the 90s". She says: "Geri left just before one of the concerts I had tickets for in the 90s and I still went, but it wasn't the same. "I went to watch them on their reunion tour 10 years ago - when Posh was included. I was so, so excited but then felt a bit 'meh' as I left the arena. "The constant shouts of 'girl power' really worked in the 90s and songs like Wannabe were just brilliant - but it all felt a bit dated. "Having said that, I sung Stop on karaoke at my wedding and it was one of my favourite parts of the day!" And perhaps the best analogy from Michelle about the upcoming tour? "When I was at primary school I used to love that sponge dessert with pink custard. "I'm sure if I had it now, then I'd think it was rubbish! I'm worried the Spice Girls are a bit like pink custard!" ### Ariana Grande's 'secret' album has nothing to do with her

An album of what appeared to be unreleased Ariana Grande songs had nothing to do with the singer herself, Newsbeat understands. Fans had been speculating whether she secretly released a whole album under a different identity. Someone going by the name of Zandhr put the collection, called Nobody Does It Better, on several streaming services. But a source close to the singer has told Newsbeat the album "was not affiliated with her" in any way. After several users started debating online whether the 10 tracks were Ariana singing or not, the songs became unavailable. The songs certainly sounded like they were being sung by Ariana herself, but it's still not known who compiled the collection (i.e. a fan) or who got their hands on the tracks. We do know the release was completely unofficial and was posted by an unauthorised third party. The tracks included Cadillac and Champagne, which were thought to be versions of Ariana's previously unreleased songs. It was available on at least three different streaming services, but has since disappeared. Adding fuel to the fire, the biography of Zandhr on Spotify appeared in the upside down font which Ariana Grande has used on her most recent album campaign. While the music was still available, fans knew many of the songs already: Too Close was a bonus track on the Japanese version of My Everything. Nobody Does It Better was apparently intended for her debut album. Better Days is a song that Ariana Grande performed with Victoria Monet at the One Love Manchester tribute concert. In Your Hands is thought to be the collaboration between Ariana Grande and Diplo which was teased in 2016. The album seemed to have been around for about a week, but it's only in the last 24 hours that people picked up on the link to Ariana. Last weekend, the singer released surprise single Thank U, Next, in which she sings about four of her ex-boyfriends including Mac Miller and Pete Davidson. She sings: "Thought I'd end up with Sean / But he wasn't a match / Wrote some songs about Ricky / Now I listen and laugh. "Even almost got married / And for Pete I'm so thankful / Wish I could say thank you to Malcolm / 'Cause he was an angel." Even though her fourth studio album, Sweetener, was only released in August, she's already teased that a whole new album is on the way before the end of the year. As yet, no-one can seem to find significance in the name Zandhr, or a connection to Ariana Grande herself. BBC

From the Comedians Quote Book If there's a bullet out there with my name on it, that's okay - it's my time. It's the ones that say "To whom it may concern" that worry me.
